

Crooked River Wetlands Complex

Putting the environment to work for you

Welcome:

The Crooked River Wetlands Complex is more than just a place for plants and animals. It is a 120-acre park designed for wastewater treatment — reclaiming water through natural processes and returning it cooled and cleaned into the Crooked River.

Planning, permitting and designing this project took eight years to complete. Its goal was to save millions of dollars in future wastewater treatment for the residents of this area by using Mother Nature to treat, clean and cool the water.

In relying on nature to treat water, rather than building a treatment plant, we reaped the extra benefit of creating a wetland park that serves as a sanctuary for birds, animals and fish for all to enjoy. Many contributed to this effort and created a serene environment that will serve our community for many years to come.
